State of Infrastructure and Reconciliation Negotiations

With both chambers of Congress on state work periods, the past week once again saw little public action on the reconciliation bill formerly known as Build Back Better. However, Biden administration officials and allies have continued to rally for Congress to pass a climate focused package. Energy Secretary Jennifer Granholm projected some optimism that "We're still hopeful, I'm really hopeful actually, that the climate portion is wrapped very soon;" however, it remains to be seen if the same sentiment is felt by Sen. Joe Manchin (D-WV) and Sen. Kyrsten Sinema (D-AZ), whose votes will be necessary to pass the Senate. Time is running out before the midterm campaign season, but the return to D.C. may propel negotiations among the Democratic Party, with a consensus bill likely featuring clean energy tax credits as a centerpiece.

Madam Policy - Vice President of Public Affairs for Plug Power Erin Lane is creating history by helping the US reach its net-zero emissions goals by 2050. Plug Power is a leader of clean hydrogen and zero-emission fuel cell solutions that are both cost-effective and reliable, and Erin leads the company's work with the federal government to build a robust hydrogen ecosystem and economy. Thanks to this work, the US government is adopting policies to ensure that hydrogen energy is a reality today. Erin sat down with Madam Policy hosts Dee Martin and Rebecca Brown to chat about the impact that geopolitical events—like the war in Ukraine—and domestic policies—like the Bipartisan Infrastructure Law—have on the US energy supply. The trio also discussed the importance of coalition building and clear messaging about the sometimes complicated topic of hydrogen energy. Erin is a leader, mentor, and friend who is an expert political strategist, coalition builder, and genuinely nice person. Listen in to learn about the progress and future of hydrogen, how Erin’s work continues to positively impact our environment, and Erin’s mentorship of future leaders of the industry.
